Back to the Drawing Board. How to customise with IFP Group!

You can trust IFP Group to have plenty of storage, packaging and handling solutions at hand when your business needs them, but sometimes you'll find that the best results are found by going back to the drawing board.

Material handling storage solutions

Custom-designed products help give your business visibility and impact!

Custom-designing large volumes of products requires the construction of a mould for our injection-moulding machines.

Here's our guide to find the perfect customised fit for your business.

Take stock:

Assess how you package, store and handle your products including work practices, safety and health requirements.

to see if anything else can benefit from a customised

Ordering, tooling and delivery:

Once you're happy with the level of customisation and its level of functionality, you can place your full order.

We will start the machine tooling process and then develop and manufacture your product ready for market.

Know your goals:

Branding, product development, increased efficiency or a different way of working? Customising large volumes of packaging and storage products can work from the production line, all the way to the store-front.

Final checks:

Take stock again: Assess again how you package, store and handle your products solution.

Your onsite analysis of the prototype will allow us to further refine your product.

Contact us:

Bring your idea to us by talking via Live Chat, call +64 9 636 9193 or pop into the Auckland showroom!

How will it work:

We will develop a prototype or sample product to test.

Create a plan: We know our inventory and have an international network of suppliers we can work with to develop any customised product. We will work with you to determine whether it is more economical to have IFP construct a mould and mass-produce the custom item locally, or whether it is cheaper to source internationally.

> After our project assessment, we will provide a quote.

Refine those details:

Pick the right materials, size, design, colour to suit your needs.

Where will it work:

We can visit your company to see how a customised product will work on your existing business set-up and discuss further refinements.
